

Keeping safe

Here are some things you could include in a safety plan:

- Warning signs and triggers - write down what thoughts and feelings happen before you start to have thoughts of suicide.
- What you might need to do to make yourself safer - like throwing away razor blades, or asking someone you trust to keep your medication for you.
- Activities you can do to calm and soothe yourself - like going for a walk, writing down reasons to live, create a hope box that has positive things inside like pictures and messages from loved ones.
- What you have done in the past that has helped.
- Name at least three friends or family members you feel comfortable talking to on your plan so you can ring them if you need to.
- Emergency helpline details.

Guide to suicide awareness

For people aged 11-25

What is suicide?

Suicide is intentionally ending your own life.

Having suicidal feelings can mean having thoughts about ending your life or making clear plans to take your life. It can also mean having thoughts that people would be better off without you or that life is not worth living.

Not everyone who has suicidal thoughts tries to or wants to end their lives. A lot of the time, people just want to stop feeling the way they are feeling.

Let's be clear:

- Suicide is preventable.
- Using the word suicide does NOT put the thought in someone's head or make it more likely to happen.
- People who talk about suicide, or have suicidal thoughts, are not attention-seeking.
- Not everyone who has suicidal thoughts is mentally ill.

Why might someone feel suicidal?

Suicidal feelings can impact anyone, of any gender, age, race, or background.

Someone might feel like they can't see a way out of a situation, or that they can't cope with their struggles. Others have suicidal feelings and aren't sure why.

You can't always tell when a loved one or friend is considering suicide, but there are some signs you can look out for:

- Withdrawing from friends or family.
- Feeling hopeless or worthless.
- Using alcohol or drugs to cope with feelings.
- Finding it hard to cope with everyday life.
- Feeling overwhelmed or 'burnt out'.
- Not wanting to do things they usually enjoy.
- Sleeping more or less than usual.
- Being low in energy.
- Self-harming.
